CHARLOTTE.

R. P. WARING, Editor.

Thursday, November 26, 1869.

Wendell Phillips.

While the whole country rejoices, says the Wilmington STAR, at the near prospect of a final settlement of the pernicious agitation of the negro question, there is one man to whom this prospect of peace is a fit occasion for the indulgence of despair. Wendell Phillips bitterly laments that the country is now "floating away from the keen and angry devotion to the one great question of the war—the negro."

Hear the frantic appeal of this inveterate agitator and born Jacobin for renewed strife:

"This should rouse our friends to more activity—our day is fast slipping away. We must work while the day lasts. Once let public thought float off from the great issue of the war, and it will take perhaps more than a generation to bring it back again. Meanwhile two things are evident—Unless some remedy is devised, the negro will stand in peril and use his rights only at great personal hazard for many years to come. Secondly, it is as evident that the administration at Washington does not mean to interfere actively in his behalf. President Grant not only does not plan any interference, but he cannot by any appeal be roused to allow or arrange any."

Just in proportion as the country grows weary of prolonged strife, Phillips grows more clamorous for its renewal. He revels in the tempest and languishes in a calm.—But we believe that his power for evil has departed. His day has gone. The North followed his fanatical teaching only too far, so long as he aimed at a goal of solid and attainable results. But now that he pursues ghostly shadows, it wisely prepares to abandon him. The North emancipated the slaves; it made them voters, established their legal and political equality with the Southern whites, enforced its reconstruction policy, and has taken practicable measures to make that policy perpetual. It now feels that it has done for the negro all that it can do, and that further agitation of the negro question is folly and crime.

The negro is not in peril. He is as secure in his civil and political rights as the white man. The Northern people know this fact, and are unwilling to make farther sacrifice of the business interests and domestic tranquility of the country. Within two years Phillips will have additional cause for lamentation, that the country has "floated away from the keen and angry devotion to his one great question of the war."

A CITY UNDER ARREST—THE MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF GALENA ARRESTED AND TAKEN TO CHICAGO.—The way of those who are indebted to bondholders is hard. It has proved so in this State, where whole boards of supervisors have lately been arrested and brought before the court for ordering assessment to pay off bonds; and in one or two cases mayors and aldermen have been either arrested or threatened with it. And now the fever is spreading. Our neighboring city of Galena just now finds herself in the grasp of some importunate creditors of this kind, and is suffering the penalty. It would seem that judgment had been rendered against the city, and payment is now trying to be enforced. But the plan proposed by the City Council for so doing was not satisfactory, and the result was that a United States deputy marshal came over from Chicago yesterday and arrested Mayor Brand and five aldermen on summary process. He took them to Chicago on last evening's train, there to appear and answer before the Federal court.

A petition is to be presented to the President from residents of British Columbia, asking for annexation to the United States.

THE BROKEN HOME.

"TRUTH STRANGER THAN FICTION."

In San Francisco, on the north side of Folsom street, overlooking Mission Bay, stands a palatial residence.

The interior of this house is even more beautiful than its exterior, every apartment being in its way a gem of magnificence and refinement.

The library especially realizes the most perfect ideal of an elegant and cultured home.

And yet, at the moment we look in upon him—one August afternoon, as he occupied his library—the proprietor of all this wealth appeared of all men the most miserable.

He was Mr. Morton Preble, for many years a leading banker of San Francisco.

It was in vain that the broad bay-window at the south end of the room had been opened, giving ingress to the sunshine and the fragrance of rare flowers—in vain that the walls were lined with richly carved book-cases and paintings—in vain that soft couches and luxurious chairs had been gathered around him.

He was wretched.

He lay on a sofa, in the depths of the great bay-window, the wreck of a once powerful man. His figure was thin and gaunt; his face white as marble; his eyes having an expression of woful apprehension, of harrowing anxiety, of dreadful expectancy.

It was evident at a glance that no merely physical ailment had made him what he was.

By what withering secret, by what destroying affliction, had he been thus agonized? thus haunted? thus hunted? he so noble and good! he so wealthy and distinguished!

As he moved restlessly upon his luxurious cushions the pretty clock on the mantel-piece struck five, every stroke seeming to fall like a hammer upon the heart of the nervous invalid. He aroused himself, struggling feebly to a sitting posture.

"Oh, will this fatal day never, never pass?" he murmered; "nor bring us relief?"

Noticing with a nervous start that he was alone, he touched a bell upon a table before him, and called:

"Helen, Helen! where are you?"

Before the echoes of his voice had died out a step was heard, and his wife entered his presence.

"I left you only for a moment, Morton," she said, advancing to the banker's side. "You were dozing, I think. I wished to send for the doctor!

She was a beautiful woman, of some six and thirty years, graceful, with broad white brows, and loving eyes, in which the brightness and sweetness of a sunshiny nature were still perceptible, under a grief and anxiety no less poignant than that evinced by her husband.

"The doctor!" he echoed, half-reproachfully.

"Yes, dear," she said, in a calm and cheerful voice, as she drew a chair to the side of the sofa, and sat down, stroking the corrugated forehead of the invalid with a magnetic touch. "He will be here immediately. Your last nervous crisis alarmed me. You may become seriously ill!"

Mr. Preble bestowed an affectionate look upon his wife, but said despondently:

"The doctor! He cannot 'minister to a mind diseased!' Oh, if these long hours would only pass! If I only knew what the day has yet in store for us!"

"Look up, Morton!" enjoined Mrs. Preble, with a reverently trustful glance upward through the open window at the blue sky, and as if looking beyond the azure clouds therein. "Let us appeal from the injustice and wickedness of earth to the goodness and mercy of Heaven!"

The banker gave a low, sobbing sigh.

"I cannot look up, Helen," he answered, with a passionate tremor in his voice—"only down, down at the grave that is opening before me!"

Mrs. Preble continued to stroke his forehead softly, while she lifted her pale face to the sunlight streaming into the apartment.

"Look up, Morton—always look up!" she again enjoined upon the invalid. "During all these fourteen years of agony, I have not once doubted either the goodness or the justice of Heaven, 'Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted.' I believe that we shall yet rejoice more keenly than we have mourned, and that we shall come to a glorious day of joy beyond all this long night of sorrow!"

The face of the invalid lighted up with an answering glow, and he murmured:

"Glorious faith! My wife, you are indeed a blessed comforter! Perhaps, after all, you are right!"

A knock resounded on a side-door at this juncture, and the next moment Dr. Hutton, the family physician, for whom Mrs. Preble had sent, entered the room.

He was an old man, portly in figure, with white hair and beard, but with a fresh and ruddy complexion, a pair of shrewd blue eyes, and with an exuberant boyishness of manner that sat well upon him. He had a kind heart and a clear head. He approached the sofa, after greeting the husband and wife, and lifted the thin restless hand of the invalid, feeling his pulse.

"Quite a high fever," he said after a brief pause. "Worrying again, eh, Mr. Preble? You are wearing yourself out. Medicine will do you no good so long as your mind is in its present condition. I must give you an opiate—"

"Not now, doctor," interposed the banker. I cannot—must not—sleep to-day! I need to be broad awake now, for I cannot tell at any moment what the next may bring forth. I am looking for the culmination of all my years of anguish—for the crowning agony of the whole. Perhaps even now— Ah, what was that?

He started up wildly, and then as the sound that had disturbed him was not repeated, he sank back again on his cushions, pallid and panting.

The doctor looked at Mrs. Preble with an anxious, questioning glance.

"It is the anniversary," she replied to his unspoken inquiry—"the anniversary of our loss."

"Ah, yes," said the doctor. "I remember."

"Yes, it's another of those terrible days," cried the banker, in a hollow whisper. "Sit down, doctor, and I will tell you the whole story. I can think of nothing else to-day, and am almost wild with apprehenson and anxiety. Sit down."

Dr. Hutton drew up a chair and seated himself, his face expressing the double solicitude of a friend and physician.

"You knew us fourteen years ago, doctor," said Mr. Preble. "We lived then where we do now, in a cottage on the site of this great mansion. There were but the three of us—Helen and I, and our three-year old Jessie. And it was fourteen years ago to-day that our little Jessie was stolen from us."

"I remember it," said the doctor softly. Yet might she not have been lost, Mr. Preble? She went out to play in the garden, if I remember rightly, and was never seen by you again. She might have strayed away.

So we thought for a whole year, doctor, interrupted the banker. We never dreamed that she had been stolen. We searched everywhere for her, and offered immense rewards for her recovery. I employed detectives, but all to no purpose. When our little Jessie ran down the steps into that flower-garden, and he pointed to the front of the house, "as if the earth had opened and swallowed her up, we never saw her again."

"She must have found the gate open, and wandered out," suggested Dr. Hutton, "She might have strolled down to the waters and been drowned."

The banker fixed his burning eyes upon the physician's face, and whispered:

"I said we never saw the poor child again. I did not say we had not heard of her. She was lost on the 9th of August, 1854. For a year we thought her dead. But on the anniversary of our loss we received a written message concerning her."

"A message!" cried Dr. Hutton, starting.

"A mere scrawl—a single line in a hand evidently disguised," said the banker. "Here it is."

He produced a dingy scrap of paper from a drawer in the table, and held it up to the view of the physician, who read as follows:

"August 9, 1855. Jessie, ha, ha! Jessie."

Dr. Hutton looked, with a puzzled air from the scrap of paper, which he turned over and over, to the countenance of the banker.

"I can make nothing of this," he declared. "It is merely a date, with the name of your lost daughter. It tells me nothing."

"Nor did it us, at first," said Mr. Preble. "Then that name and that date, with the demon laugh connecting them, set us to thinking. A whole year we agonized over the dreadful problem, and then we received another message, which you shall see."

He thrust a second slip of paper, identical in shape and appearance with the first, before the gaze of Dr. Hutton, who read it aloud:

"August 9, 1856. Your Jessie still lives."

The physician started, as if electrified.

"Ah! this is something definite—something decisive," he muttered. "It convinced you that your daughter was still living."

"Yes, doctor," said Mr. Preble, "and every anniversary of that day has brought us some message. This disappearance of the child, mysterious as it is, does not seem to me half so strange as that the villian who took her away could contrive to communicate with us every year since, and always on a particular day—the anniversary of that on which she was stolen—without our being able to discover who he is. And a still greater wonder to me is what can be his motive. It seems incredible. If it was stated in a novel many people would not believe it. But 'truth is stranger than fiction.'"

Mrs. Preble drew from her husband's breast-pocket his note-book, opened it to the proper page, and presented it to the physician.

Dr. Hutton adjusted his spectacles, glanced over the page, and then slowly read the group of entries aloud. The entry the first year is as follows:

"August 9, 1855. Jessie ha, ha! Jessie!"
And the next year it is—
"August 9, 1856. Your Jessie still lives!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1857. She is in good hands!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1858. She is well as ever!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1859, I saw her yesterday!"
"August 9, 1860. She's growing rapidly!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1861. She continues to do well!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1862. I've seen her again!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1863. She's becoming a woman!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1864. Your child is thirteen!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1865. She's lovelier than ever!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1866. She's really charming!"
And the next—
"August 9, 1867. My reward is at hand!"

And what shall we get to-day!

The physician looked up and fixed his thoughtful gaze upon the bereaved husband and wife.

"How did these messages come to you?" he demanded.

"Invariably by post," replied Mr. Preble. "Usually to the house, but sometimes to the office!"

"And you have never seen their author?"

"Never!"

"The last of them is dated, I see, a year ago to-day!"

"Yes, yes," faltered the banker, "and the time has come for another message. This is the 6th of August, 1868!"

"I see," said Dr. Hutton. "And this is the secret of your terrible excitement! You are expecting to receive to-day another of these strange messages!"

There was a brief silence. Mr. Preble's hand fluttered in its task, and her face grew very pale. The banker breathed gaspingly. The physician regarded them both in friendly sympathy.

"We shall hear of her again to-day," said Mr. Preble; "and what will the message be?"

The mother averted her face. Her brave heart faltered as that question echoed in her soul.

"The writer of these letters is unquestionably the abductor of your child!" said Dr. Hutton. "Have you any suspicion as to his identity?"

"Not the slightest," said Mr. Preble. "We have puzzled over the problem for many years, but we cannot guess who he is."

"Think," said the doctor. "Have you no enemy? I do not mean people with whom you are not friendly—every stirring man has plenty of these—but a downrighi enemy! Is there no man whom you knew in the East who hated you? No one against whom your were called upon to testify—no one whom you possibly injured?"

The banker shook his head. He had asked himself all these question repeatedly.

"I have no such enemy, doctor," he answered with sincerity of voice and manner.

"And Mrs. Preble?" suggested the doctor, turning to her. "Have you no rejected sultor who might be revengeful enough to desolate your home?"

"No," said the lady. "I was married early. Morton was my first lover!"

"This is strange—very strange!" muttered the doctor. "You are not conscious of having an enemy in the world, and yet you have an enemy—a hidden foe—a fiend in human form—who is working out against you a fearful hatred! And you have not the slightest suspicion as to whom he is?"

"Not the slightest," declared the banker."

"Not the slightest!" echoed Mrs. Preble. "My husband had a step-brother who might have been capable of this infamy—but he is dead!"

"The handwriting is not familiar?"

"No. It is merely a rule scrawl, as you see," said banker. "It suggests nothing—except that it is evidently disguised!"

Again there was a profound silence.

"Our child is seventeen years old now," at length murmured Mrs. Preble, her voice trembling. "She is on the threshold of womanhood. No doubt, during all these years, she has yearned for us, wherever she may be, as we have yearned for her!"

"But where is she?" asked the physician—and now his voice was broken by his deep sympathy with the agonized parems. "Where can she be?"

"Heaven only knows," answered the mother. "Perhaps in San Francisco—perhaps in some rude but in the interior, with some obscure farmer, and under a name that is not hers! I think her abductors would have carried her to some lonely region of the interior, among the valleys and mountains. Yet I never see a young girl in the streets without turning to look at her. I never hear a girlish voice without listening eagerly, half fancying that it may prove the voice of my lost Jessie!"

"Oh, pitying heaven!" sighed Dr. Hutton, dashing a flood of tears from his eyes. "Will this long agony never be over?"

"We hope so, and even believe so," answered Mrs. Preble, with the firmness of an unfaltering trust in God's mercy. "The last message we received from our enemy seems to point to some kind of a change."

"True," assented Dr. Hutton, looking at the message in question. "It is unlike the others. It says that his 'reward is at hand.' He means either that he intends to marry your daughter, or that he intends to demand money of you for bringing her back—or both."

"We shall soon know," said Mrs. Preble, with forced calmness. "To-day we shall have another message, no doubt. What will it be?"

The banker turned restlessly on his sofa, and his face grew even paler.

"Whatevr it is, let it come!" he murmured. "Anything can be borne better than this awful suspense. Let it come!"

As if his impatient words had precipitated a crisis, a step was head on the walk at this moment, and a ring at the front door followed.

"Another message!" breathed the banker.

A servant soon entered, bearing a letter, which he extended to Mr. Preble, saying:

"The bearer is in the hall."

With an eager gaze, the banker glanced at the superscription of the missive.

"It is from him!" he faltered.

He tore the envelope open.

It contained a slip of paper, of well-known shape and appearance, upon which was scrawled a single line, in an equally well-known handwriting, which the banker exhibited to his wife and the physician.

This line was as follows:

"August 9, 1868. At six I will call."

A shock of wonder and horror shook the three simultaneously.

"Will call!" cried Mr. Preble, starting to his feet, and glaring wildly around.

"Is coming here?" cried Mrs. Preble, also arising.

"It seems so," said Dr. Hutton, his eyes again reverting to the message. "He will be here at six o'clock, and see! it is six already!"

Even as he spoke, the clock on the mantel-piece commenced striking the appointed hour, and at that instant heavy footsteps resounded in the hall, approaching the library.

"It is he!" cried the doctor, also arising.

As the last stroke of the hour resounded, the door leading from the hall again opened.

One long and horrified glance cast the banker and his wife in that direction, and then she fell heavily to the floor.

Her senses had left her. The above we publish as a specimen chapter; but the continuation of this story will be found only in the N. Y. Ledger. Davis' "Pain Killer."

Stephen Miles, Davenport, England—Gents—I have great pleasure in recommending the Pain Killer. For more than three months I suffered severely with a sore throat, for which I consulted the best physicians, but derived no benefit until, by a friend's advice, I tried your Pain Killer as a gargle. In a short time it completely cured me. While in India I frequently gave your medicine to the natives when no doctor could be had, in cases of severe headache, rheumatic pains, cramps in the stomach, and cholera, AND IT ALWAYS CURED THEM. I consider it a most valuable medicine.

Yours, &c. STEPHEN MILES.

GENTS.—I have used Perry Davis & Son's "Pain Killer" in my family for nearly a year past with great success. I deem it a valuable medicine; it gives almost immediate relief. I like to have a supply always on hand, and would cheerfully recommend it to all my friends.

We Live in three Climates.

In this country we have at different seasons of the year, the temperatnre of three climates. Our Springs and Autumns have a softness and mildness that belong only only to the Temperate Zone; our Mid-summers are torrid, and our Mid-winters almost arctic in their rigidity. These changes involving a variation of from ninety to one hundred degrees of Fahrenheit during the year, are upon the whole conducive to health and long life, but they tend to entail upon us some distressing complaints which can only be escaped by the exercise of due care and the use of a proper antidote when the system is pre-disposed to contract them.

The chief and most annoying of these disorders is dyspepsia, once supposed to be incurable, but which, since the introduction of HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, now about twenty years ago, has proved to be a perfectly manageable disease.

In the Spring and Fall, but more especially in the Fall, the symptoms of dyspepsia are generally aggravated. The profuse expenditure of the animal fluids under the burning sun of Summer, is apt to leave the stomach weak and indolent and incompetent to the task of perfect digestion. It requires a tonic which will rouse it from its lethargy and brace and invigorate without irritating or inflaming it. This tonic has been provided in the wonderful vegetable preparation which has replaced in a great measure, all the old palliatives formerly prescribed by physicians, under the false idea that the disorder could not be radically cured. The success of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS in all the varieties of dyspepsia, acute or chronic, has effectually exploded this fallacy, and it is now recommended as a specific for indigestion by some of the most eminent members of the medical profession.

A NEEDLE IN A LIVING MAN'S HEART. At one of the late meetings of the Academy of Science at Milan, Italy, Dr. Serafin Bissi exhibited the heart of an insane nobleman who died lately, and who at various times attempted suicide, after he had killed his father in one of his insane fits. The unfortunate man died of cancer of his tongue, which he had bitten off during one of his excesses of lunacy. When he was dissected a needle of three inches in length was found in his heart The coroner's court was informed that twenty-two months before his death he had told his parents that he had pierced his heart with a needle. They, of course, did not believe it, because no change in the functions of this organ could be remarked. He never complained of any pain in the chest or in the heart. Scientific men regard this case as being of most extraordinary interest to surgeons and anatomists.

The Legislature of North Carolina.

SENATE.

TUESDAY, Nov. 23rd 1869.

The Senate was called to order at 11 o'clock.

Mr. Winstead in the chair.

The Journal of yesterday was read and corrected, as the vote on A. H. Galloways (col.) substitute fixing per diem milage at $7 dollars, proved upon examination to be a tie instead of 21 to 20. The President voted in the affirmative, stating that he should vote against the proposition on its third reading, in its present form.

SPECIAL ORDER.

Bill to further protect the interests of the State in certain Railroads and to require accountability on the part of their officers was taken up.

Mr. Lassiter offered a bill from the Code Commission as a substitute, authorizing the Governor to appoint a commission to examine into the affairs of the several Railroads, said commission to have a clerk with a salary of $500 and report in 1870.

Mr. Graham raised the point of order, that his resolution relating to the same subject, was introduced 2nd and therefore entitled to precedence. That the resolution of Mr. Welker came second on calender and the bill of Mr. Respass third, the proposition of Mr. Lassiter to offer his substitute at that stage was out of order and the chair so ruled.

Mr. Graham's resolution to appoint a Committee of the Senate to investtgate the sale of the bonds of the Western North Carolina Railroad, was taken up.

Mr. Moore of Carteret, offered Mr. Welker's resolution as a substitute, which requires an investigation of all the Roads composed of three Senators for each Road.

Mr. Jones of Wake, moved that the whole subject be referred to a special joint committee, and that they be instructed to report a bill.

Mr. Respass moved to amend by striking out Special Joint and insert Finance, and that they be instructed to report next Thursday.

Mr. Graham called for the previous question, which was lost.

Yeas, 18. Nays, 22.

Mr. Respass' motion to refer was lost.

A. H. Galloway, colored, moved to lay the resolution and substitute on the table, which prevailed.

Yeas, 22. Nays, 19.

The bill introduced by Mr. Respass was then taken up. (This bill provides that the officers of the several Roads shall make full reports of their transactions quarterly,) passed its second reading.

On motion of Mr. Lassiter the rules were suspended in order to allow him to introduce his bill from the Code, placed on calendar.

Mr. Martindale, introduced a resolution proposing to raise a committee of three Senators to confer with the Superintendent of Public Works, to ascertain and report what information he has in reference to the management of the various Railroads. Adopted.

On motion, the Senate adjourned until to-morrow at 10 o'clock.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY Nov. 23nd. 1869.

A message was received from the Governor, submitting certain claims against the State in favor of M. A. Beldsoe and the late Gov. Worth.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The consideration of the resolution maintaining the credit of the State and payment of every dollar of her debt, was resumed, the question being on the motion to reconsider the postponement for one month.

A discussion ensued assuming about the same shape as that of yesterday.

Mr. Durham said it was particularly unfortunate for the credit of the State, that this resolution was introduced. The faith of the State had already been pledged by the solemn acts of this Legislature and by the signatures of the Governor and Treasurer, with the great seal of the State attached. The resolution was not worth the paper it was written upon, the introduction of it in the face of things threw a suspicion upon the matter, as if there was a latent purpose to repudiate. He was opposed to repudiation; he abhorred the word, but he would oppose the payment of bonds thrown upon the market at 25 cents in the dollar, by speculators and ring men. The bonds that have been sold at anything like their adequate value, he was willing to pay. He opposed this resolution because no sensible man would pledge the State to pay bonds in the hands of agents charged with fraud, selling at from 15 to 25 cents, for which the people would have to redeem dollar for dollar. He believed the people were opposed to repudiation, but this kind of legislation would soon drive them to it. Every honest man revolted at the idea of repudiating honest debts, but when the State is victimized to the extent of millions by sharpers and speculators, it was the duty of right-minded men to protest and take measures against it.

Mr. Argo, also opposed the resolution, in quite a lengthly speech, his position being substantially the same as upon yesterday, when he first made the motion to postpone

Mr. Seymour next took the floor in a long speech favoring a reconsideration of the vote postponing, and advocating the adoption of his resolutions. During his remarks, said if they were going to repudiate a part of the debt, repudiate all of it; if they were going to take the shame of the thing, take the gain of it also, by repudiating the whole debt, &c., &c.

After some further debate Mr. Seymour called the privious question. The call was sustained. the motion to reconsider was adopted by a vote of yeas 59, nays 39.

Mr. Argo was then allowed to withdraw his motion of postponing for 30 days.

Mr. Welch moved to postpone for one week, from to-day. The yeas and nays being called, the motion was rejected by a vote of yeas 45, nay 61.

The question then recurred upon Mr. Malone's amendment inserting the words "legally incurred and honestly disposed of as to the landed debt." The yeas and nays being called resulted in the rejections o the amandment by the following ballott:—Yeas 86. Nays 64.

Mr. Durham offered the following amendment as an additional resolution:

Resolved, That this General Assembly will not recognize as valid any future sale by the several Railroad Companies of the State, of the special tax bonds, authorized by Acts of the General Assembly at the regular session of 1868 69 at a price less than 60 per cent. of their par value.

Mr. Pou next obtained the floor and argued for some time in advocacy of a substitute offered by himself when matter was first brought forward. (Published before.)

Mr. Seymour called the previous question, when.

One motion of Mr Argo, the Houes adjourned.

S. B. SEXTON'S CELEBRATED

PATENT BALTIMORE PARLOR HEATERS

for Anthracite or Bituminous coal, have been in successful operation for the last two years, and have proved to be the best and most economical stoves ever introduced and put in operation. They are getting to be generally used, often in the place of furnaces, for heating the lower and upper rooms in dwellings and offices. Two or three Stoves heating the finest dwellings, and Public and Private Buildings WARMED and ILLUMINATING, having all the beauty and cheerfulness of an open grate fire, but are more ECONOMICAL, CLEANER, and RADIATING A LARGER AMOUNT OF HEAT. We can refer to thousands of families who have them in use.

We manufacture our own COOKING STOVES, and we guarantee them to be equal to any sold for baking and cooking. We have shapes to take in any wood and with large ovens, and are superior stoves for baking. We are getting out some new patterns of Cooking Stoves, that will burn Bituminous coal, hard coal, or wood. They will have a beautiful polish, and will stand among the No. 1 Cook stoves. Our Cooking Stoves are Baltimore made, and we guarantee the plates. Our Cooking Ranges are pronounced the best and cheapest in the market. Baking of all kinds can be done in our Ranges as well and quickly as with a Brick oven. We will manufacture S. B. SEXTON'S new pattern Hot Air Furnaces, warranted to burn from 30 to 70 hours with ones filling.

Thankful to our friends and the public for their past favors, we solicit a continuance of their patronage.
